A brand new wheel-chair has been donated to the Library for the use of the patrons in the library by the late Mr. Michael F. Buckley Jr. Mr. Buckley was an avid friend of the Chiloquin Library and wanted them to have the wheelchair that he was not able to use himself, so that patrons with disabilities could more easily access books and reading materials.

Chiloquin Food Pantry Update

“Thank-you everyone” who supported the Chiloquin Food Pantry by bringing in items for the Rummage Sale and for purchasing items. Funds will pay expenses and purchase extra foods. The commodities provided by the Klamath-Lake Counties Food Bank have lessened in the last few months while last month we served 73 families, with more than 200 people helped.

The Chiloquin Food Pantry needs:

- 1) Volunteers to help especially at this time of year when our volunteer pool lessens during the holiday season (541-891-6168).
- 2) Gently worn clothing and other items. We plan to have one more Rummage Sale before the end of the year (541-783-3095).
- 3) Empty barrels to be placed in town for donations of non-perishable foods and Artists to decorate Food Barrels (541-891-6159).

Our next Food Pantry distribution will be Wednesday, October 27.

INTERAGENCY FIRE CREWS CONTINUE TO FIGHT HAY FIRE ON NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGE AND FOREST LANDS

Chiloquin, Ore. - Interagency firefighting personnel continue suppression efforts on the Hay Fire burning an estimated 2,500 acres in the Klamath Marsh National Wildlife Refuge, with about 20 of those acres on the Fremont-Winema National Forests.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, U.S. Forest Service, Bureau of Land Management, National Park Service, Oregon Department of Forestry and contract crews have firefighters and equipment on scene. The following resources are presently assigned to this incident: 12 engines, two Type I and two Type II crews and numerous other equipment and overhead personnel. Chiloquin/Agency Lake Rural Fire Protection District, Walker Range and the Oregon State Police also assisted with initial attack efforts.

The Hay Fire was ignited on the afternoon of October 14 and is burning inside the marsh and on adjacent National Forest lands just south of the Silver Lake Road. The fire is currently under investigation. "In the long run, the Hay Fire will help improve habitat on the Refuge by removing decadent vegetation that will encourage waterfowl, shore birds and sandhill cranes usage in the spring," said Mike Johnson, Klamath Marsh Refuge Manager. "The South Central Oregon Fire Management Partnership Type III team is implementing a fire suppression strategy to ensure the protection of sensitive resources and private lands around the marsh and firefighter safety.”

Due to smoke and increased fire traffic, fire officials ask the public to use caution when driving on the Silver Lake Road around the Wocus Bay junction (approximately milepost 9) and on Forest Service roads near the fire. This weekend’s predicted cooler temperatures should assist with firefighting efforts.

Gosh what gorgeous weather we are having right now! I've spent the day doing odd jobs in the garden—mostly planting out all the plants I grew in pots from cuttings over the summer. It was so nice to see that I still have flowers, despite the freezes we have had already. Of course all the annuals were frozen long ago, but there are some plants that can take the freezes and still look great. I've also noticed that these plants began flowering later this year than they did last year. I can only put that down to the very late start they got this spring. My Sweet Autumn Clematis and Russian Sage have not opened flowers buds yet, and I'm afraid they will not get the chance this year. The Russian Sage was beautiful last year, but I haven't had the Clematis long enough to know if it will be too late every year.

Also just opening flowers now is a plant I first saw here at Train Mountain, flowering that year in mid-September. Obedient Plant (Physostegia virginiana)—so called because you can swivel its flowers around and they will stay put—grows 2 to 3 ft tall in clumps, with spikes of small pink snapdragon-like flowers. It's a great addition to the garden for late season flowers. It is native to eastern North America from Quebec to Manitoba, and south to Texas, Louisiana, Alabama and Georgia, occurring in swamps, damp meadows and prairies, moist open woodlands, bogs, and pine savannas.

On my way back and forth across the yard I had to stop several times to look at one of my favorites, the New England Asters. (Symphyotrichum novae-angliae). New England Aster is a US native that grows in prairie swales, and wet meadows, ranging from Quebec to Alberta, south to North Carolina, Alabama, Arkansas, Kansas, Colorado, Wyoming, and New Mexico. They are beautiful, easy to grow plants prized for their masses of pink to purple flowers with bright yellow centers. The plants grow 2 to 6 feet tall and work well in the background or can be pinched back several times until midsummer for a more compact shape. They prefer average to moist soil and full sun. They are universally attractive to insects, from Monarch butterflies to every variety of bee, and mine were humming with activity in the afternoon sun.

Although the bees consider the Autumn Joy sedum to have finished flowering, the dry flower heads look every bit as good as the fresh flowers to this gardener. I'm going to divide some of the clumps next spring so that I can have more of it to watch next fall. It tolerates heat and infertile soil, so it's a very handy plant to have around. Also still flowering is my Darlowe's Enigma shrub rose and the Johnny Jump Ups. The rose began flowering in July, and the Johnny Jump Ups in April—that's a lot of flowers. There are other flowers in my garden, but not in their glory now as they were in spring and summer. Still, every flower is welcome before the long cold spell that is to come.

Sandi Selk, Artist of the Month at Two Rivers Gallery

Designing with fabric, playing with fiber, and teaching have been my main creative focus since my early 20's.

After earning my Bachelor's degree in Home Economics Education with a major in textiles and clothing from Drexel University in Philadelphia, PA, I taught tailoring for two years. Way back then "Home Economics" was a subject taught in high schools. Now it is a phrase that is so old that not many people even know what it is!

Since 1996, my home has been in the Chiloquin, Oregon area. We love being in this rural area with our animals - one cat, two Golden Retrievers, two llamas and two alpacas. And, yes, I do have fleece, rovings and yarn for sale.

I have taught quilting classes from North Carolina to Oregon.

Sandi shows a wonderful sense of color in her quilting. She has an amazing variety of quilts on display this month, featuring a number of different quilting techniques. Do stop by and see them!

Fremont-Winema National Forests Repairing Camas Creek Bridges to Increase Load Limits

The Fremont-Winema National Forests will be repairing two bridges in the South Warners that cross Camas Creek on Forest Service (FS) Roads 3910 and 3915. The work is expected to begin October 18 and run through October 22.

These two bridges were recently inspected and posted with a 10 ton load limit rating. To allow for heavier traffic, the Forest road crew will be installing additional columns on both bridges and replacing an unsound bridge cap on the FS Road 3915 bridge.

During the repair work, both FS Road 3910 and the bridge will remain open to traffic. Motorists may experience short delays. FS Road 3915 will be closed to traffic while the bridge on that road is lifted to replace the cap.

FS Road 3910 and 3915 are located off of Oregon Highway 140 approximately two miles east of the Warner Canyon Ski Area.

Klamath Falls

RARELY SEEN MODOC WAR MOVIE TO BE SCREENED

A movie about the Modoc Indian War will receive its first local public screening in 56 years* at the Klamath County Library at 6 p.m. Tuesday evening, Oct. 19, 2010. "Drum Beat," the only major motion picture ever made about the Modoc War, stars Charles Bronson in the role of Captain Jack, with Alan Ladd playing Johnny McKay, a composite character who represents at least three figures from real life.

The movie is set in the Klamath Basin, with frequent references to Lost River and Fort Klamath. The storyline begins with growing conflict between white settlers and Modocs, and climaxes with the murder of Army Gen. E.R.S. Canby. Most historians, however, have little praise for the movie that strays from the factual account in several important points.

Monday's screening, co-sponsored by the Library and the Klamath County Museum, is designed simply to give local residents a chance to see this Warner Bros. film that cannot be purchased or rented from any source in the U.S. (The museum's copy came from Australia as a gift from museum supporter Daniel Woodhead.) Monday's free showing will be preceded by a brief panel discussion about the movie's relative strengths and weaknesses.

As far as we know, "Drum Beat" has not been shown publicly in Klamath Falls since its original run at the Esquire Theater (now the Ross Ragland Theater) in 1954

Chiloquin Branch Library - The library has many ways to get involved and many fun ways to contribute to your local community. Some opportunities:

1. Storytime: If you would like to read two or three stories to a small group or preschoolers, and lead them in a simple craft or activity, the library staff can use your help. Story time is at 12:30 PM on Thursday afternoons during the school year.
2. Summer Reading Program: There are many opportunities during the summer to help out with this very worthwhile program.
3. Honor collections: these are racks of paperback books, magazines and audiovisual materials that patrons may check out without a library card. By offering these collections, more people in the community can be reached and a greater diversity of materials can be made available without incurring the costs of cataloging and processing items for the general collections. The staff would like to have some help in keeping these racks orderly, attractive and relevant. Check with the librarian for information on how to "adopt a rack".
4. Help with sorting donations.
